

Stevens Institute of Technology men's soccer

Community Service

Foust Elementary School – Greensboro, N.C.

December 4, 2008

The day prior to the men's soccer national semifinal match with Amherst College, nine members of the Ducks took part in a community service event for the NCAA. Nolan Sandberg, John Radvany, Zach Carr, Chris Faustino, Brian Weldon, Peter Montalvo, Craig Moquin, Aaron Perelman, and Dan Ehehalt were the players that participated.

The Ducks' time with the children began with a meet and greet where the Stevens student-athletes received gifts and a "cheer" from the Foust students. After introductions, everyone went outside for some relay races and other games before the Ducks taught the kids some things about soccer and played a game.

After the game, the kids answered questions for special prizes and several Ducks did some tricks with the ball. Moquin was the most impressive with his moves, but Carr got the kids' vote and won that part of the day.

After the tricks and prize giveaway, the students were able to get autographs and spend a few final moments with the men's soccer players that they had grown very fond of in the short time spent.

It was a great experience for both parties as everyone seemed to have a great deal of fun.
